米国 アーラム大学 特別講演会
Special lecture from Earlham College, USA

講義タイトル

Student Leadership: A Journey, Not a Position

講師

Laura Vaughn, Ph.D.

Faculty leader for the Earlham College Studies in Cross-Cultural Education (SICE) Program

概要

In the past 20 years, leadership education programs in Japanese colleges and universities have exploded in growth from only one or two programs in 2008 to around 20 today. However, what does leadership mean to students? The word leadership has been traditionally viewed as something connected to someone who is in a position of power such as a club president or a manager in a business, but that is changing. Ideas about shared leadership are being taught with a focus on team experiences.

This lecture will talk about what leadership is, how everyone can practice leadership, and how leadership can help you to better understand who you are as a person, and how you can help others understand themselves. While leadership can be used for job-hunting, it is more than something to find a job. Leadership is a way to better understand how people work together both at school and at work.
